Movements at the seat of War. From the London Times, May 18.]

The first letter of our correspondent who accompanies the Austrian army, gives a concise narrative of the events which have taken place since its first invasion of the Piedmontese territory, three weeks ago. On the 10th of May, the Austrian head-quarters were at Mortara, Vercelli having been abandoned, and the Sesia recrossed the day before. -From intelligence received up to the present time, we learn that the Austrians have refired from Voghera and Casteggio, on the south of the Po, and there can be no little doubt that the invasion of Piedmont may now be considered at an end. The consequences of this movement seem to have been small indeed, in a military point of view. It has harried on the war, and so far may have been favorable to Austria, and it has allowed General Gyulai to strip the entire east of Piedment, as far as the Dora Baltea, of all kinds of provisions and forage; but the strategical lesults have been very trifling. From the accounts we publish, it would appear that the Austrians have all the scientific skill and completeness of appointment which are at-tributed to them. They constructed bridges, mined masonry, discovered the mines of their adversaries, marched, and foraged with all the experience of a veteran army. It remains to be proved whether these qualities are accompanied by that vigor and endurance which will enable them to hold their ground against a force of French and Piedmontese, which, perhaps, may soon considerably outnumber them. All accounts agree that the incessant rains, the rising of the rivers, and the flooding of the low grounds have been more serious obstacles to the Austrians than the defensive dispositions of the Sardinian generals. For a fortnight the troops of Gen. Gyulai seems to have roved where they pleased, from the spurs of the Alps to the plains south of the Po, and hardly an attempt was made to stop them. Even the artificial inundations which can be produced in the low grounds were not resorted to, and only the powers of nature stemmed the tide of invasion. But the Austrians, though affecting great indignation at the three days' delay imposed on them by diplomatic interference, may think themselves fortunate in having escaped the consequences of a march on Turin. They would probably have missed capturing the Sardinian army, which would either have sought shelter under Alessandria and Genoa, or fallen back to the most western limits of the kingdom, and they would have been taken in the rear by the French from Alessandria, while the state of the country would have prevented a retreat. The mere distinction of capturing and plundering a capital city would have been dearly purchased by such dangers as these.

This great army, over which the Emperor

Francis Joseph himself is shortly to take supreme command, which is directed by the most distinguished generals of the empire, and which is filled with officers taken from noble houses of Germany, is now shortly to be matched against the democratic levies which own the rule of the Emperor Louis Napoleon. Plebian vigor and ambition are to be pitted against aristocratic pride .-Schwartzenbergs and Stadions will command in apposition to children of the people who have passed their lives in barracks and estaminets, or in the camps of Africa. The campaign will have an unusual interest for ourselves, to whose army are attributed many of the faults which may diminish the efficiency of the Austrians. Yet there is one signal difference between them. Among us the individual soldier is of excellent material, and requires only skilful generalship, which he sometimes fails to find, while the Austrian military organization is confessedly excellent, but the men, though robust and active, want the spirit which education, nationality, and a common language can alone give. The course of the campaign, it is of course impossible to predict. It is probable that the Allies will not respect the neutrality of Parma, although the revolutionary movement in that duchy proved a failure, and the Duchess Regent was restored to power by her own army and people.— A small State has as much right to independence and neutrality as a large one; but then the possession of Parma and Modena would allow the French to turn the position of the Austrians, and perhaps insure the abandon-We may expect therefore, either that the territory of these States will be crossed on some pretext, or that disturbances will be fomented to produce an imitation of the Tuscan revolt. The French can afford to allow the neutrality of the Papal Sates, for the Po in its lower course is almost impassable against an enemy; but the beginning of the campaign will probably coincide with some political movements which will give the French a more extended line of operations than the course of the Ticino. The Austrians seem to expect an attack on their left, for the latest intelligence represents them as hard at work in the neighborhood of Stradella, on the right bank of the Po, a little below the confluence of the Ticino. In this direction the first blow will probably be

The London Fire Brigade. According to information which the Chief Engineer of the Boston Fire Brigade has obtained from England, respecting the working of the London Fire Department of that city, which has a population of between two and three millions, is only one hundred and twenty-five men! If the number in London were in proportion to that employed in the principal American cities, the Fire Brigade of the English capital would be 25,000 men. Although steam has not yet been introduced in London, this small force, owing to its superior system, works more effectively than the vastly superior numerical force of the large American cities, even with the great mechanical advantage of steam, which ought to reduce proportionately the manual labor.

Virginia Election.

There is no longer any doubt of the success of the Democratic State ticket. In the 9th Congressional district, Harris, independent Democrat, has, it is said, 700 majority over Skinner, the regular nominee. This is Letcher's distret. In the third district, it is alleged that an error has been discovered in the count which elects Caskie, the regular nomince, over De Jarnette, his independent opponent. In the 13th district, Elbert S. Martin independent Democrat, it is said, is elected over Benjamin Rush Floyd, Democratic nominee. The Opposition have gained a number of members to the State Senate and House of Delegates, but there is no doubt the Legislature will be decidedly Democratic.

On Thursday evening, 26th May, by the Rev. Edward Martin of Nottoway, ROBERT WHITE, esq., of Romney, Virginia, to Miss ELLEN E. VASS, daughter of James C. Vass, esq., of Henrico.

At his residence, county of Fleming, (Kentucky) May 19th, 1859, General DANIEL MORGAN, aged 68. The deceased was son of Captain Simon Morgan, who served with distinction as an officer of the Revolutionary war, and brother of the late Commodore Charles Morgan; was a native a Fauquier county, (Virginia,) but had resided more than forty years at his late residence.

Failures in the Iron Trade.

BIRMINGHAM, May 16 .- The failure of Messrs. Crosswell, ironmasters, of Tipton, scarcely known until mid-day, has excited a good deal of anxiety, and fears lest it should lead to other ensualties. The amount of indebtedness of the firm is not a present known, but it is believed that by far the greatest proportion of it is owing to the Dudley and West Bromwich Bank, at whose instance the stoppage has taken place. The firm of Crosswell Sons is a very old one in South Staffordshire, and formerly it occupied a good position, but for some time past (indeed so far back as 1855,) there were rumors that the house owed a large amount to the Dudley and West Bromwich Bank, and a stoppage was at that time spoken of. This fact has given rise to the supposition that the new liabilities are not considerable.

Yesterday a circular was issued announcing that the firm of Charles Vilatti & Co. was unable to provide funds to meet its current engagements, and a meeting of the creditors is convened. house did business with South America, and the stoppage is attributed to the suspension of payments by the house of Alfred Willers & Co., Hamburg.

Richmond Markets, June 1.

The State elections have absorbed the public interest and attention for a few days, and the markets, always dull at this season, have been for some time unusually so. There is but little change in the quotations. Flour is very dull; but with light stocks; holders continue firm. Wheat is unchanged. Corn is not so stiff, and quotations are a shade lower. Bacon has receded a fraction, and Whiskey also. The general aspect of money matters is no altered since our last. The market is easy and Exchange continues low.

The weather has been favorable for several days. and the wheat crop is reported as very fine, with here and there some ravages by the bug and fly.

The receipts from customs yesterday only amounted to $82,000, and the balance in the Subtreasury was $4,752,086. The export of specie from this port for the week ending Saturday, was $5,126,643; the total for the year 1859 was $25,558,572. THE ARM OF JUSTICE. On the evening of Sunday, June 15th, 1856, four prisoners, named respectively Moore, Croggin, Bailey, and John H. Ray, escaped from the jail of Washington county. The latter three were part of the then well-remembered "Naylor gang," which had kept our citizens so long in .. 108 nightly terror of robbery and violence. In the course of some days or weeks at most, all were recaptured except Ray, who had gone into one of the neighboring counties of Virginia and assumed a name of three syllables, Emerson, we believe. Either from want, or to keep his hand in, he committed a felony there, was apprehended, tried, convicted, and sentenced to the State penitentiary at Rich-mond. The term of his punishment would expire on the 6th of the present month of June, but the Governor of Virginia has given up the interval and pardoned him out .-Accordingly, two officers of this city, Wise and Allen, presented themselves a day or two ago at Richmond, duly armed with a requisition and other documents, and received their prisoner. Yesterday morning they brought him hither and lodged him once more in the edifice from which he escaped three years ago, to take his trial for the crime of which he stands charged .- Nat. Int.

WASHINGTON ITEMS .- Citizens opposed to the Democratic candidates last evening nominated Mr. Jabez Wheeler, for collector; Juo. Sessford, for register; and for surveyor, Mr

De Maine. Chas. Stewart, a colored servant at Gibson's restaurant, made a desperate attempt to kill Mr. G. Hunt, the principal bar-keeper, by knocking him on the head with an axe. Fortunately, Mr. Hunt, at the moment the fellow struck at him, closed in with 164 him, and the blade of the axe passed over his head, the helve inflicting a very severe wound. The cause was the recommendation of Hunt to Mr. Gibson to discharge Stewart for intemperance, which so exasperated Stewart, that he sought the opportunity to be revenged.
